Global Inspiration,

Personal Sanctuary

Did you know?

The Re-Modelista provides three hours of design services by a professional designer on every project at no charge!

Whether you're struggling with design, or you have a great idea that you're just not sure how to complete, complimentary design services will bring your remodel to life in a way you're sure to love.

Patricia and Wayne moved frequently in their earlier years. Out of all of the places they lived, the place that spoke to them most was South Africa, where they lived and raised their two sons for more than five years. Married for 45 years, Patricia and Wayne also have three grandchildren.

"We love South Africa, but Houston is home," Patricia says. Specifically Missouri City, where they've been for almost 25 years. "This is the home my 18-year-old granddaughter knows. It's one of her favorite gathering spots."

That means they're staying put in the 30-year-old home, which also means it's time for some updating. They chose the Re-Modelista, Teri Gilberg, to update their primary bathroom, creating a sanctuary that reminds them of their beloved South Africa.

"Our shower was horrible. I didn't even like stepping into it. And the jacuzzi tub was just too big," Patricia explains. Teri and her team fixed both of those issues. "We enlarged the shower and replaced the old jacuzzi tub with a big, rectangular soaking tub. In the shower, I finally got my bench I've wanted for 40-something years! That bench is probably my favorite part of the bathroom."

"My wife did a fabulous job of bringing the room to life," says Wayne, who recommended the shelves to add their personal style to the room. "Patricia has an eye for contrast. She brought in the South African influence and we love it."

The homeowners decided to keep the black and tan flooring and work the rest of the room around it. Everything else – cabinets, counters, mirrors, light fixtures, faucets, shower, and bathtub – was completely remodeled. "Because I kept the floor, I wanted to bring in some darker colors of faucets that leaned darker or black to coordinate," Patricia explains.

"Teri's team was great. Her crew was all very neat and they stuck to the deadline," Patricia says of the Re-Modelista. "Her communication was fantastic and we didn't have any surprises. The knowledge she brought to the project was so appreciated. The three hours of interior design services really helped – it gave me someone to bounce ideas off of."

Does Your Website Pass the Five-Second Test?

by Nicole Grace

“Did you know that you have just five seconds to make a good impression when customers visit your website?” asks Jason Tello of Social Reach Consultancy. “Does your website pass the Five-Second Test?”

Social Reach focuses on website design and re-design to help clients increase business. They have a quick questionnaire for their clients to help them determine if their website passes that test. “Users should understand who the provider is and what they represent, all within five seconds of seeing the site,” Jason explains.

Jason’s partner, LuzMarie Garcia, says, “The Five-Second Test is one of the highest ROI improvements a business can make to its online presence. We want to help our customers drive conversions – we want to turn those visitors into new clients. A new or refreshed, effective website can help companies do that.”

The Five-Second Test is a classic UX (user experience) test designed to measure first-impression clarity. The goal of this test is to see if the company’s audience is able to understand the following:

- What does the business do?
- Who does the business help?
- What questions do visitors have?
- What stands out about the business?

“Our goal is to ensure website visitors understand who the website represents, why the company is different, and why they should be trusted ... all within five seconds of landing on the page,” Jason explains. “This is especially important for small businesses, who don’t generally have the same brand recognition as larger businesses. Small businesses don’t get second chances to make a good impression.”

LuzMarie and Jason opened Social Reach Consultancy to give clients something in between the large agencies with high-costs and the less expensive shops that don’t offer ongoing support services. Let Social Reach help you turn website visitors into customers. Visit socialreachco.com and take the Five-Second test today.
